ABRAM HATCH

I was born in Heber City, Utah, September 8, 1879. My parents were Joseph and Sarah Jane Clyde Hatch. Mother bore eight children, six sons and two daughters. She died at the age of 50, and father was killed in an auto wreck when he was near his eightieth year.

On my seventh birthday father gave me a small printing press which he purchased on one of his trips east, where he made annual trips with trainloads of fat cattle from our Colorado, Utah and Wyoming ranch for the eastern markets at or Chicago. The press would print $3\frac{1}{2} \times 5$ inches and was of sufficient capacity to print letter heads and large envelope forms. Mother was a banker and in the three years between and ten I saved \$35 (present purchase power about \$200) and bought the press on which I later printed the Heber Herald, a 4-page 9x12-inch weekly paper with a circulation of 300 copies continent-wide for the subscription. There were three pages of hand-written and one page of advertising that brought \$6 a week, or near \$300 yearly. I during high school time came the entire time the Herald (consisting of a boy of 14) was drafted and the Herald ceased publication.

I was editor, manager, typist and necessary newspaper devil. When the staff was stalled by parental demands the Herald had no chance but to fade into the tails of its life and death struggle: accomplishments are past history, as by J. Cecil Alter in his book, "Editorial Journalism." Utah State History Society, Salt Lake City, 1938. Pages inclusive.

I entered the Heber High School consisting of one room, one teacher and a dozen assorted students. September, the Preparatory School at the University of Utah, September, 1896.

I left the Heber Brass Band as a tary, librarian and one of the after a period of ten years.

In 1897 I entered the A.C.I.
